If the ballot-box in the city of New York can be successfully guarded against est men. fraud the Democrats cannot by any possibility carry that State. Their atrength lies Democrats, and, as a Democrat is to be seseverest test.

HERE is a good suggestion for the Republican Legislature of some Stalwart State, New York, for example: Instantly propose an amendment to the National Constitution embodying the principles of protection to the parity of the ballot now provided for in the national election laws! The supremacy or overthrow of these principles has already become the dominant issue between the two great parties in Congress, and an attempt by the Republicans phant will go round and round when the to engraft them into the Constitution would concentrate the intelligence and patriotism of the country in their support. The Democrats would, of course, oppsuch an attempt, and the campaign of 1880 would naturally be fought upon this question. Incidentally the rights of the National Government and the subordinate privileges of the governments of the States would enter into the consequent discussion, and, in fact, the decision of the question would amount to an emphatic declaration of the will of the people in the premises. Will New York, exercising her legitimate and organic prerogative to suggest a constitutional amendment, take this matter in hand? The idea is, simply and briefly, that the General Government shall have proper control over the election of its own officials-a control that will protect electors, high or low, and black or white, in exercising the right of suffrage conferred upon them by the National Constitution.

THE OPENING REVOLUTION.

The public press and the people are discussing the situation as presented by the revolutionary action of the late House of Representatives with as profound an interest and earnestness as the crisis was considered when secession occurred and rebellion ensued in 1861. The country is confronted by a fresh menace of danger, and the people are beginning seriously to apprehend that history is about to repeat itself. Both Senators THURMAN and BECK have not only made but have justified the threat that the wheels of Government should be stopped by withholding supplies, unless certain partisan legislation shall be yielded to under be Sergeant-at-Arms of the House, and will Executive sanction. This is the issue that has been made by these Democratic leaders, and it has startled the country with gal-

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES.

The early prospective organization of the ext Congress has opened a lively canvass for "the loaves and fishes " that are being crambled for. Almost every shade, grade, and stamp of the Democrat is now repreented on the stage here as competitors for omething in the way of patriotic recognition. All "patriots," you know; but there are different grades in the breed. We have cen looking over the catalogue of "patriwho are on the list for the high ofes, and the name among them that seems bring with it more worth and better qualifications for the Becretaryship of the senate is that of RICHARS RANDOLPH MC Mahon, of West Virginia. A Solid Front Against the Democracy. To the Editor of the National Republican 2.

SIR: I am one of those Republicans whom t is the fashion to call Stalwart. As such I have not been able to approve certain policies in the past. But I recognize, as I hope all houest men do, the common necessity of presenting a solid front against the existing con-

There is scarcely an intelligent voter in the and considered in every school district, and the average intellect of the country compreyet in defail. That belief among the thinking people is that the nation is in as great peril now as in 1860.

The one cardinal principle which is the foundation of the Republic is freedom of elec-tion, the right of each individual citizen to exress his choice as to men and measures by his halfor without molestation in forming or ex-pressing such choice, and without suffering or injury for having so expressed it. Oppression, violence, or fraud, however or wherever com-nitted to defeat this great right, are diastrous to the country, in violation of the very necessities of its existence, and the highest crime against free government.

Rebellion in 1861 was the violent consum mation of a conspiracy long meditated, long prepared. The overthrow of free elections now is the fruit sought by an existing conspir-acy as formidable and as bad as the other.

The one was bold, salient, defiant, when its incubation had been accomplished. The other is more cautious as yet, is still covered by pre-tenses of law, is still shielded by gill phrams of "State Rights," "Home Rule, and the like, but the deadly animus and fatal purpose are clearly visible through the thin hypocritical precess.

Stripped of all verbiage the Democratic doc-ine of to-day is this: That neither the Inited States as a nation, nor any citizen of he United States outside of the State directly affected, have any right to scrutinize or inter-fere in elections held in States for Representatives to Congress. That supervision by the United States over such elections is tyranny. That all laws of the United States providing tribunals and pounities to try and to punish fraud and violence in such elections are un-constitutional and ought to be repealed. As yet the leaders do not attack the consti-tutional amendments, but they do attack all laws made to enforce such amendments. The amendments are a dead letter without the law to enforce. The courts of the United States. which, in discharge of their high duties, do enforce the laws now existing on this subject, have drawn upon themselves the load and ribald demundation of the whole Democratic party, North and South, and leading organs de-clare that this jurisdiction must be taken away r that at least seven members of the next longress will be in the penitentiary. Now, it does not require much statesmanship for much learning to understand that to the extent that fraud and violence are permitted to alter the free choice of any portion of the copie or to suppress such choice, if made, in Congressional elections, such fixual or violence ets directly upon every attizon and voter in the country.

If such fraud and violence reach to the extent that it did in the last election, it imposes an unauthorized majority in the present House and in the next Senate; and our laws are made for the whole country, by the aid of a few men who have no right in law or con-science to the law makers. These few men, creatures of crime, hold the balance and turn he scale, and constitute the Domogratic ma-ority in Congress. To continue this rule of grime, to extend the realm of fraud and vioence into our great cities, is the living prin-iple of action in the Democratic party of to-fay, Seeing all these things, the thoughtful men of the country look to the Republican organization as the sole barrier to rampant and insolent audacity; the sole bulwark of honest and free elections; the sole conservator of the freedom of individual choice and of the liberty of speech and action. To perform these great duties, to fulfil these high trusts, there must be solid unity of purpose and action in the cu-tive army, from commander-in-shief to private, from the President to the simple voter.

laid aside; if there be disappointments or per-sonal grievances, let them be put away. In sonal grievances, let them be put away. In the immediate presence of the enemy, with immant expectation of battle, our chief care should be union—our duty is to keep the line and look to our ammunition, and not quarrel as to who onght to be sattler, or whether it was wise a year or so ago to send a flag of truce or sheek a parley. True, the flag of truce was fired on, the purley was contemptatously rejected, but the fact that it was sent and was despised gives us strength for the battle.

The fact of the fact that it was sent and was despised gives us strength for the battle.

A Republican President at this time and in his quarrel is ex officio the leader of the Republican party. We cannot well spare him. He certainly cannot spare us. Together the general object can be fuffilled with absolute certainty. Antagonized against each other we waste in intestine feuds forces that should be devoted to a common struggle. "Forgetting then the things that are behind," let us press forward to the high result of the next Presidential canvass—in which the purpose shall be to secure to every citizen of these United States an absolutely free expression of his choice as a citizen of the common states. choice as a citizen, and to crush out at once and forever, by the voice of the people, the most dark and dangerous conspiracy that has over threatened free government in this

A New Idea a Good Pension Scheme. WASHINGTON, D. C., March 1, 1879.

To the Editor of the National Republican : Sin: It seems to me that Congress might end all the fraud, as well as talk about it, besides reducing the expenses of the Government, if it would pass a law-first, alloting a certain number of acres of land to pensioners who would accept it in lieu of their pensions, and, second, commuting the pensions of all others, paying the present worth (to be ascertained after the method adopted by life losur ance and legacy companies) in money, or bonds of the United States drawing a less rate of interest; or, if deemed best, a donation of land and the present worth of the pension in money might both be given, the Government In any event to be relieved, upon acceptance, from event to be relieved, upon acceptance, from all further claim whatever.

Before issuing the warrant or commuting the pension a final examination by proper medical authority could be had to determine whether the right to a pension exist or not.

I, for one, would be willing to surrender my present pension of $18 per month under such a law, and doubtless a majority of pensioners would be willing to do the same. Such a plan would relieve the Government of considerable expense, prevent all fraud, save the pensioner expense, prevent all fraud, save the pensioner from trouble and annoyance, and give him a "fair start" in life, if he have it not already. Besides, it would relieve him altogether of the feeling of dependance—mendicancy, in fact—that he experiences when he draws the "blood money" awarded him for the loss of an arm or leg or other injury received during the "late unpleasantness."

DEMOCRATS in Texas have hit upon a new plan of settling the possession of an office. If a Democrat is elected, he goes into his official duties gracefully and blandly, and if he is defeated, he enters upon them flercely and sternly, taking possession of the office to which he aspired by force of arms. of the office to which he aspised by force of arms. At the opera-house, in Cincinnati, last Saturday, the Democrats held a "reform" meeting. Judge Hoadley was one of the speakers, and the feature of his speech, which produced the most prolonged roar of applause, was the following, relative to Tilden and elpher dispatches: "I have this confidence in that old man, abused, licel about, persecuted, villified, and sued, that if, in the wisdom of the Democratic party, the old ticket should be put up again, there is no man who will jump to its support quicker than I."
